Hong kong, December 13rm, 1873. Among the literary residents in China, the present seems to be a time of extraordinary activity, which is the more to be wondered at in view of the lew and barren inducements which lead men to work in such an uncongenial sphere. Profit there is little or none. and the questionable fame acquired is at the us ever heard of the great masters of sinology before we arrived on these shores? Indeed, at home, in well-informed circles, a reputation in China is held somewhat akin to what professors of any black or occult art. They are to be forwarded on to Shanghai, were esteemed amongst country folks some fifty or sixty years ago. There is something restraint of the student, his withdrawal from society, and the almost total absorption of foster such an illusion. The sinologue has been likened to the learned professor who forms the hero of Goethe's inimitable drama. Faust-like, he is supposed to spend his nights in an atmosphere redolent with the fumes of midnight oil, amongst quaint books written in cabalistic characters, and ponderous tomes of mystical binding and weird illustrations;-tomes treating of Geomancy, Astrology and metaphysical disquisitions on the passion souls, and universal abstract unities. The vague and whimsical manner in which writers in, and after a remark by Mr. Hayllar, said it at home have alluded to Chinese affairs, have was very irregular. also contributed to this mistake. The calm philosophy of the "Citizen of the World," object to it and the inimitable "Dissertation on Roast Pig," extracted by LAME from the second chapter of the mundane imitations of Con-course rucius have left an indelible impression on the British mind. The citizen is the typical mandarin, and Ho-ti and Bo-bo are representatives of the Great Unwashed of Eastern Asia. Lordship that there was another affiduvit to on the afternoon of the 11th instant, and look-. The study of Chinese is elevated thus into an investigation of mysticism, philosophy, and primitive ignorance-words which, on the whole, are generally synonymous in their take, and is all the more absurd as most Chinese writers have been practical men. None can claim the attributes of a studious recluse, who, far from the disturbing influence of the aworld, spends his life in a long, learned dream, never once apprehending that there was a that. spark of vital interest in the pages which he read. Happily, sinology was inaugurated by meneminently practical—the old Jesuits—and Ordinance ! is now being developed by men actively engaged in diplomacy, in preaching, and in other he would rather have the case altogether on walk out of the shop with the two jackets (pro- thirty-two sat down to the wedding repast, take it is proper spirit, it will be of benefit to professions. The existence of such a school, dianfetrically opposed to the diletantism of the compilers, and the omniscience of the earlier sinologues, is a marked feature in the present literary renaissance, and to some extent, no doubt, explains the present activity in printing and publishing in China. Take, for example, the works of Mr. WADE, who has devoted himself to the Peking Dialect. His colloquial series depicts to us minutely the social life of the Pekingese, though only professing to be a text book. He has also, in his too brief elucidations on the despatches, unfolded to us the high literary value-of such works. The elegance, terseness, and thorough business nature of such productions are now generally understood and acknowledged. In them, we see the result of competitive examinations for centuries. The evidence was then resumed and was of a very varied character. A witness was called from Melbourne to show that the police or Custom-bouse officers did not invariably visit ships upon their arrival. cross examination it appeared that he landed almost as soon as the ship anchored, and that even theu boats were alongside. An artist, who had been drawing-master at Stonyhorst in 1845 and 1846, and had taught Roger drawing for about a year, gave vidence of a conversation he had with the defendant after the last trial, when he was able to answer questions put by the witness to him as to matters, one of which he thought could only be known to himself and Roger. The cross-examination was directed to show that the matters mentioned, except that particular one, were known to a gentleman who had been at Stonyhurst, and with whom the defendant had become acquainted, and that the particular matter referred to was necessarily known to at teast one other person from whom the defendant might have derived it. The witness acknowledged that as to personal identity be had bardly sufficient recollection of Roger to enable aim to speak positively after the lapse of so many years; and as to the effect of the answers given, be said he had assumed that they were the genuine efforts of memory, and the Court said that whether they were so or not, it would be for the jury to consider. A witness who had been waiting maid to Lady Tichborne was called to prove that she had to the last continued solemnly to declare her belief that the defendant was her son. A labourer was called from Tichborne who stated that he had seen Roger and Miss Doughty walking in the park and the vicinity in "February or March, 1852," and in "the Spring of 851," at both which periods, according to the letters of Roger, he was with his regiment in Ircland. He said that Roger's voice was "shrill," and that when he saw the defendant at the Christmas of his walk. A witness who she was a girl from 14 to 17-was called to identify the defendant, and also to confirm or explain some of his statements about the place. She stated that she distinctly remempered Roger there "until August, 1849."

When she was reminded by the Lord Chief-Justice that this could not be, as he certainly left in 1848, she said that she recognised the defendant "as soon as she saw him." The counsel for the prosecution declined to crossexamine her, and one of the Judges elicited that she had heard that the defendant was very stout. Mr. Bulpit, the banker, who was, it may be remembered, examined for the defendant at the last trial, was then to be called, and was in court for the purpose, but it was/announced that he was indisposed, and as the defendant's counsel were not at the moment prepared with any other witness, the Court adjourned rather

He does not eat his food with his band, but FLOWERS. taking the plates or dishes close to his mouth, eats with the latter like dogs and other animals. We asked him if he recollected anything about his past life, and he replied in the negative. We also enquired how he acquired his fondness for raw or uncooked firsh, and he said that the same was often produced for and given to him by the bhairs, i.e., welves. At our request, he walked on all fours, or more properly on his knees and palms, and we must confess, we found him more at home in that attitude of locomotion than when wellking on his loos like the species to which he is being reclaimed. Moving on his knees and palms he was as fast, nimble, and casy as a dog or a caf; but walking on his legs erect, he was as unsteady as a man in a very advanced stage of drunkenness-every moment about to meet with a precipitate fall He said also that he would feel considerably better in large holes or dens (expressing this not so much by words as by pointing to large spertures and perforations in parts of the LII Hospital compound, and also otherwise by motions, attitude, and gestures) than in the room which was set apart for him; and on our questioning him as to why he did not make himself comfortable in the former way, he said Baboo Saheb (meaning the Sub-Assistant Surgeon in charge) khappa hoga-Oudh Ex-

MISCELLANEOUS. The superior of the monastery of the Barefooted Carmelites at Alessandria bas been assassinated. No traces of the murderer have Aquarium continues to thrive, and are growing fast. Fifty of them are now in one of the table tanks at the further end of the building. A new comet has been visible for some time past by aid of the powerful telescope at the Roman Observatory. It is described as most brilliant, with a tail of extraordinary splendour. A meeting of the Dundee Presbytery has been held, at whi h the Rev. William Knight, against whom proceedings have been taken on account of doctrinal differences, resigned his position as a Minister of the Free Church. A case of extraordinary longevity is reported. Mr. Martin Maddison, of the firm of Maddison Pearce and Company, of Southampton, will reach the ripe old age of 115 years, we are informed, in May next. He is particularly active, regularly attends to business, and bears Royal Hotel, no sign of decay or incapacity. NEW METHOD OF MARING MIEBORS.-A company was registered in France some months ago as the proprietors of a patent to platinise glass, and a few days ago the same steps were taken by an English company. Glass when it has uncergone this process (it must be plate glass) looks rather dark in colour, and on being held to the light is fairly transpurent, as much so as stained glass; but the darkness of the colour seems to becaused by very minute grains of a dark colour ingrained in the glass. But if the same glass is taken from the light and D COAL, can obtain it from the Underplaced against a dark background, it becomes a signed. mirror, as bright and dazzling as the Venetian glasses, and much of the same hue. As yet the new glass has not been made into any particular form; but in a few months more it will be seen bow it can be worked up. HYMNING THE POTATO.—A Connecticut editor devotes a leading article to hymning the potato-the Irish potato. He glows-he gleams, he scintillates in expatiating upon the deliciousness of the tuber in general and of this year's crop in particular. "They burst their jackets and overflow in cataracts of vegetables enow-flakes." Here's richness! Here's picturesqueness! A bounce into practi-cality announces that the present price in Connecticut of a bushel of these jacket snowflakes is only one insignificant dollar, which is chesp for so much overflowing beauty. Then doth this poet, with a pensive kind of awe. proceed to state that not everybody knows how to cook these marvels. "There's an art." be says, "a genius like the poet's-born, not made," which produces fried potatoes as delicious as a fairy dream; but he gives not the recipe. What peculiarly touches and charms one, however, in this song of praise, is the statement that the potatoes are good and cost one dollar per bushel.—New York Tribuns. ADVI.- Berkeley, Sept. 1889.—Gentlemen, I feel it a duty I owe to you to express my gratifude for the great benefit I have derived by taking 'Norton's Camomile No. 12, he has constantly on band BEEF, Pills.' I applied to your agent, Mr. Bell, Berkeloy, for the above named Pills, for wind in the stomach, from TABLES, and OLUMAN'S STORES, &c., of which I suffered excruciating pain for a length of time, having tried nearly every remedy prescribed, but without deriving any benefit at all. After taking two bottles of your valuable Pills, I was quite restored to my usual state of health. Please give this publicity for the benefit of those who may thus be afflicted.—I am, Sir, yours truly, HENRY ALLPASS.—To the Proprietors of NORTONS COMOMILE PILLS.

IMPERIAL QUARTO. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONAR' WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDABIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, publishe at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

INOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them; are bere given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typo graphy displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thoroby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not, previously attained, and dispensing with those following facts are submitted for consideration, textals; a splendid fit guaranteed. this work contains more than 50,000 English SCARFS, UNDERSHIRTS, SOCKS, &c. words, and apwards of 600,000 Chinese characquires examples to display the various applimensure, cations and equivalents of different words which 3m 162 have one general meaning. AN ADVENTURE IN ST PAUL'S.

I began to feel despondent about the mat- and I fellter, but went round the church once more till I came to the end of the south transept anybody living inside St. Paul's; I should ed by the nave and transent on the western side, a window, from which came the faint gleam of a candle. I stood, and looked be glass in his hands with some liquor in it; a was moving about within. There was a chamber of light about us. bird cage in the window; on the sill outside, some red flower-pots. Presently somebody came to a desk near the window and hurt a bit. Bless you! you didn't fall more began to write: an old man with white hair, than three feet." If I could only make him see me, perhaps he would take compassion on me, and let see me. Looking from the lighted room death inevitable! into the twilight outside, it was hardly possible that he should see anything. I thought looking about me. "I thought I was carried of flinging a pebble at the window; but it up into the dome." was a good distance off; I might break the And so you were. You'd have been a darkness.

Whilst I was speculating, I heard a door its hinges. I sprang forward, and met a gray-headed old man with a thin pallid face, who was just opening the iron grille.

With all the eloquence of which I am office of letting me into the sacred fane. He ... besitated, shook his head; at last he relent- dead faint. But what were you about to let | ed. "Very well," he said, "it's against rules; but, as you say, it's a long way to the Antipodes. I'll let you in, if you don't mind stopping inside alone for ap hour; it will be that time before I return; and I must lock go inside?"

I thanked him warmly, and said : " Cer-' tainly, yes." Indeed, I was delighted at the idea of an hour in perfect stillness and above, full of hazy, uncertain shadows, a and huge piers encompassing it. From the - west, a subdued crimson glow; eastwards the choir, dark and sombre; the windows of the apse shewing as gray luminous patches, the altar glooming in the distance like some funeral catafalque. White figures gleaming here and there in shadowy recesses, marble warriors, heroes, statesmen.

Under the dome, in the great open space, was a rast crowd of chairs-wooden rushbottomed chairs, lashed together in rows, looking towards the east. Choosing one of the most central of these. I sat down, and began to dream, peopling this wide area premium charged for insurance; such discount with a vast invisible congregation.

In soft, long-drawn cadence, the bell of Paul's struck out the hour of ten: I had been in the place nearly an hour. I felt chilled and numb. .: Enough of dreams. Let me walk briskly up and down, and think of the busy scenes awaiting me; the rapid # flight over continents and seas; the wanderer's return; the warm, glad welcome wife and children holding out eager armsright at the other side of this huge world. I paced rapidly up and down an avenue.

between the chairs. I had seen enough: I was anxious to be released, to get away from the world of shadows, into the living world outside. For a moment, I stood in what seemed to be the very centre of the dome. and looked upward. A faint gircle of light marked the apex of the soaring vault, and just above my head I saw-my eyes being now accustomed to this half light-I saw, say, a rope hanging down from the vast height above.

Then I remembered the spider-webs I had seen outside about the ball and cross. And as I stood, and looked, and listened, I heard faint sounds of hammering and knocking. Men were at work, hundreds of feet above: a light shone here and there, twinkling like a star.

In years gone by, I used to be a famous gymnast, and the sight of the rope hanging just above my head put me in mind of my ancient prowess. I was heavier now, my muscles less clastic; still, there was some salt of youth in me. How many times, I wondered could I, hanging to that rope, draw my chin up to my knuckles? The rope was just out of reach, but I leaped up and caught it-once, twice, thrice. Policies issued for long or short periods I felt a kind of emulation with my old self: I wented to persuade myself that I had not lost much of my former prowess; and so I went on drawing myself up and letting myself down, not touching the ground, till I grew tired, and stretched myself out, expecting just to reach the pavement with my toes; Bu I couldn't reach it. Casting a glance helow me, I saw with horror that the flooring had vanished from under me. I was swinging suspended by my hands high up in Perhaps, if I had dropped at that moment, I might have escaped with only a serious Westminster Abbey, even. For it wants a shaking; but I hesitated, and was lost. Slowly and steadily, the rope was being its puzzling chapels; and after a certain wound up. I shut my eyes.
